

Travel Goods Exhibitors Deliver Form, Function, and Finesse

By Kathy Witt

Innovative designs like reconfigured case construction and kids' cases that pack along a lot of wow. Intelligent features – customizable capacity, cooling componentry, integrated RFID blocking technology – that recognize the days of one-size-fits-all travelers are long gone. Inspired colors and patterns, including two-tone interest and come-hither python prints, that are drop-dead gorgeous and full-on fabulous.

As the demands and duress of traveling continue to increase, shift and sharpen – testing the mettle and resolve of travelers and travel goods manufacturers alike – makers of luggage and other travel items have stepped up their game to show they are not only in step with the ever-evolving world of travel but, in many cases, a step ahead. Products deliver finesse in form and function, and always a little bit more.

Here is a preview of some of the products that you'll see at The 2017 International Travel Goods Show at the Las Vegas Convention Center this April.

Antler
