New Device Aids Sleep While Sitting

DEBUTING AT THE TRAVEL GOODS SHOW IS A DEVICE THAT SUPPORTS a traveler's head and is so different from travel pillows and padded collars that the United States Patent and Trademark Office created a brand new product category for it. The patent-pending SleepStik has no foam padding; instead, a rigid support is used to provide a perfectly placed attach point for an elastic head loop. The design offers unparalleled support and comfort to travelers who must remain seated for extended periods of time. SleepStik centers and balances the user's head, ensuring that a centered body position is maintained and eliminating the worry of encroaching into neighboring personal space after falling asleep. SleepStik can also be used for daily commutes on buses and trains and in passenger seats in cars. Sharp turns and sudden stops on the road are cushioned as the elastic head loop gently returns the user's head to the normal position after the disturbance has passed. MSRP: $29.95. For more information, visit sleepstik.net.

SleepStik was invented by an award-winning Seattle-based product designer and mechanical engineer.
